OFINIORS OF THE PRESS.

We have carefully examined the number before us, and can most cheerfully and heartily recommend itsus one of the best massaines for young people now published. The editor, while he does not forget that he is preparing a work for minds not yet fully developed, avoids the opposite mistake of stringing foughter new pages of silly honsone to explain meaningless wood cuts. The engravings in the Magazine are in keeping with the letter press. When the merits of this work become known, it will not only be a favorite with oblidien, but will be halled monthly by parents as one of the most useful and delightful publications is sued from the American Press.

"We have wetched the growth of this, "The Young People's Magazine," with a great deal of interest. It is the best and cheapest mouthly issued in this country, and no publication for the young, is so deserving of the sancess it undoubtedly commands. We advise every parent to subscribe for it, if they wish their children to cultivate a correct taste in literature and art."

Transcript.

The Young People's Magazine for June came to us wit vidence of steady improvement and value, which deserves an elligenment. evidence of steady improvement and vacous as decidedly the liest one issued. The frontispice is a gern of its kind, and is the first of a series of American Poets dilustrated, entitled the Path of the Flowery Woodland, linkstrating Bryant, and is an exact picture (whether so intended or not), of a scene in West Brockfield, Mass. The articles are corily and familiarly films trated, and are of an excellent character. Daily News. "Mr. Phipps has made up an instructive and emergating Miscellany for children. Nariatives, Sketches. Poetry, scraps of curious and interesting knowledge, all with a view to assist in the formation of a sincre and guideless character in the young reader."

reader."

It is neatly printed and handsomely illustrated."

A neeful periodical, and one that cannot fail to interest the young."

It is seldent that you find such a collection of choice things gotten together so appropriately.

This heautiful and valuable Menthly for the young people should be subscribed to by everyfather or mother. The reading matter is well adapted to the capacity of the rising generation, while it is perfectly free from petty talk or budy prattic. The enferprise and taste displayed by the publishers are worthy of all praise."

[Star.

The enterprise and taste displayed by the publishers are worthy of all praise."

This firm are noted for presenting to the juvenile public a series of the most elegant Huminated Books, which have been asserted in this country. The first number of their New Magarine for Young People is how before us, and it appears to be a continuation of the same general design entiraced in their former works. The Editor is evidently a practiced writer for children, and presents a rate combination of natural case and grace in his style. This Magarine is certainly, in typography and illustrations one of the most degant periodicals were issued from the press."

'The articles are well written, and are just what are saited to publications of this sort, being neither too claborate in style nor yet written down below the level of children's comprehension—an error bat too common now adays. The magarine is prettly illustrated, and will so doubt find favor with a large class of invenile readers."

The May number is as fresh and beautiful as the flowers of that sweet menth. It contains a number of elegant illustrations and a warety of reading matter that appeals directly to the hearts of the young folk.

Specimen number gratis to Aconts, Postmasters, and those withing to get up a club, and liberal arrangements made with them for circulating the magarine.
